Learning All About The New HondaJet Elite II

A Q & A With HJOPA Co-Founder & President Mark Leavitt

Mark found himself repeating history as the first owner to take delivery of the newest model of the HondaJet. Global Elite Aviation sat down with Mark to learn just how he is enjoying his new HondaJet Elite II. Here is what he had to say.

combination seems to be working well. When the ground spoilers activate, you just feel a sense of solidity. I'm more content in every phase of flight.

Q: How are the new spoilers on the wing and enhanced nose wheel steering, do you feel more confident now landing in strong crosswinds?

Q: What about the new Elite II would you say is the most significant improvement over your HondaJet APMG?

A: We've had two fairly significant crosswinds so far, and the airplane has done remarkably well with both. I don't know who to give the credit to, the ground spoilers or the augmented steering, but the

A: If I were to list the biggest improvements, I would have to say the fit and finish is just remarkable. They really have done a great job. The new interiors are very nicely done... Also the fueling system, they have done a great job at venting the fuel system to make that work better. Read More >

Hot Summer Days, Slightly Cool Market, but Still a Sunny Outlook

The heyday of airplanes selling in hours after bidding wars may be behind us now, but that doesn't mean it is not still a seller's market.

The halfway mark of the year is always a good time to pause and take stock. While hot summer days may be upon us in full force, the aircraft sales market has officially cooled off. Yet rest assured, just because airplanes are not selling at record speeds for well over market value anymore, does not by any means imply that the market has crashed, nor that it is now a buyer's market. In fact, if you own a well equipped HondaJet with reasonably low time that has been properly maintained and cared for, your aircraft is likely still worth a good amount over what it would have been valued at prior to the market boom of 2021 & 2022. And better yet, your airplane is still capable of selling within the ballpark of its present market value, even despite the "Jet It Effect". Read More >

Global Elite Aviation Celebrates 3 Years in Business

Three years ago today Global Elite Aviation opened its virtual doors to the aviation industry and debuted a new brokerage and acquisition services firm uniquely dedicated to all models of the HondaJet aircraft. It has been quite an eventful three years since that very first day. From launching at the beginning of a global pandemic in highly uncertain times, to accelerating into the unprecedentedly wild market we all experienced in 2021 and 2022, all the while promoting the growing exposure of the HondaJet as Honda Aircraft Company introduced two new HondaJet HA-420 models and announced a third concept aircraft.
